World Heritage and U. S. Civil Rights Sites Symposium
April 20-22, 2017 - Atlanta, Georgia

The Georgia State University World Heritage Initiative is preparing a nomination of U. S. Civil Rights Sites to be considered for the World Heritage List in an effort to achieve the highest possible level of global recognition possible for these historic places. Next month, civil rights scholars and historic preservationists from around the country will gather in Atlanta to discuss this exciting project. Join us!

Free and open to the public, the World Heritage and U. S. Civil Rights Sites Symposium offers sessions that will explain the World Heritage program and its nomination process, the global significance of the U.S. Civil Rights Movement, and what might be expected of property owners and stakeholders of historic sites if they receive a World Heritage designation. With more than 50 properties under consideration by the GSU World Heritage Initiative for a nomination of a dozen sites or less, the process is highly selective.
